Alaska Department of Labor and Workforce Development Announces New Online Services for Employers

Alaska Department of Labor and Workforce Development Commissioner Greg O'Claray today announced Alaska employers have a new method for paying their unemployment insurance tax. By using the Department's new Online Employer Services (TaxWeb), employers receive ready access to their tax account information and may perform a variety of transactions, 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

"I want Alaska to be truly open for business," said Governor Frank H. Murkowski. "By providing more services online, we make it more convenient for businesses to work with the state, giving them more time to focus on company growth."

TaxWeb will help businesses compile, calculate, submit and pay through Electronic Funds Transfer, quarterly contribution reports over the internet. In addition, new employers can register with the Department. TaxWeb is secure; the use of access codes and passwords help ensure that only employers and those authorized by the employer can approve internet transactions.

"The Employment Security Division is continually working to improve and streamline its programs. We hope employers find this new service a real time and money saver," said Commissioner O'Claray. The Unemployment Insurance Tax program is administered through the Department's Employment Security Division. Employers can find more information about TaxWeb at:
