AWIB Recognizes UAA's Marshall as David G. Stone Post-Secondary Instructor of the Year

JUNEAU, Alaska—The Alaska Workforce Investment Board has named Darrin Marshall the David G. Stone Post-Secondary Instructor of the Year for significantly improving and promoting career and technical education.

Nominations for the prestigious award come from an Alaska business or industry.

“Career and technical education is a critical component of our Alaska workforce investment system,” AWIB Chair Doug Ward said. “CTE helps prepare students for a continually evolving workplace, giving them a head start on careers and college.”

An automotive technology instructor at the University of Alaska Anchorage, Marshall has achieved world class technician status with General Motors, and master certification and advance level certifications through the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence. His students have a high level of success in passing ASE and manufacturer specific certifications. Marshall chairs the Alaska Automotive Technology competition for SkillsUSA, where one of his students placed ninth in the national Skills USA competition in 2013.
